

It's hard to miss them as you drive along Barbadoes Street – a large, striking, corten steel panelled wall at number 226 announces in bold white lettering that this is the home of Weir Architecture.

It's a new home for this award-winning architectural company in a stylish, classic white villa that is eminently suited to the designs for which this practice is known.

"We're very much enjoying being back in the central city, seeing all the progress that is happening and making our contribution to that," Managing Director Robert Weir says. "We have always had a passion for creating good designs that are visually pleasing with balance and proportion.

"For us, being approachable and taking the time to listen to what our clients want and to understand their requirements is absolutely the key to producing a design that fulfils the brief. Each project is taken on its own merits with no preconceived approaches."

Weir Architecture has experience in all forms of architecture, from residential to commercial, and rest homes to light, industrial structures. It has won many awards over the years - the most recent being the ADNZ's top national award for a new home over 300 square metres for Robert Weir's own home. The clean, crisp yet asymmetrical design for the Club Tower in Worcester Boulevard was another award winner from this dynamic team.
