

Milestones

You're welcome to contribute to our Milestones page. It could be an anniversary, graduation or something your club has achieved. Send your photos and information to nsnews@snl.co.nz.

Phil Mason designed alterations won the ADNZ Residential Alterations and Additions Architectural Design Award at Auckland and Northland awards. Designer Phil Mason's "interesting" layout solutions won his company Phil Mason Consultants the award. This year's Resene Architectural Design Award (ADNZ) judges said Mason successfully used the King Edward Parade house's garage as a landscape element.

Nine oral histories were granted a total of more than $55,000 funding for this year's New Zealand Oral History Awards (NZOH), a project that tells stories of New Zealand's history and its association with its South Pacific neighbours. Auckland researcher Julie Benjamin, far left, is pictured with people she interviewed from the Auckland Coaster's Club, based on the North Shore, for the 2012 project and will interview Westport residents for this year's awards.

A charity for young people with disabilities has taken out multiple awards. Recreate NZ won the I Am Auckland youth health award for promoting healthy lifestyles and environments for young people. Manager Brent Jenkin, from Castor Bay, says Recreate was recognised even though it was up against a vast number of more mainstream youth organisations. The charity offers social, educational and recreational programmes and works with more than 300 disabled youth. Recreate's Matt Alpe won the safety and belonging award and the youth worker supreme award.