

REGIONAL AWARDS RECOGNISE ARCHITECTURAL EXCELLENCE

The physical form of our rebuilt city rests solely at the feet of our architectural visionaries, with the resulting built environment making its mark on a global level as we rebuild from the ground up.

The power of this proverbial is evident in the regional awards, which recognise the architectural excellence behind the emerging residential and commercial spaces, with an historic worker's cottage, a Chinese Methodist Church and a Hanmer home inspired by the traditional Kiwi bach representing just some of the latest designs to achieve recognition in the recent Canterbury/Westland Regional ADNZ | Resene Architectural Design Awards for 2016.

Don Roy of Cymon Allfrey Architects received two awards for his work on a contemporary home located adjacent to Wairarapa Stream.

Craig South of Cymon Allfrey Architects received a Residential Multi-Unit Dwelling Architectural Design Award for his work on a project in Gleneagles Terrace.

Architect Cymon Allfrey received a Residential Interiors Architectural Design Award and a Commended for his work on a home on Cambridge Tce.

Another architecture practice to receive multiple awards, Ben Brady of Linetype Architectural received recognition for three projects. He was awarded a Highly Commended for his work on the residential interior of a house in Hanmer, a Commended for his alteration of a Redcliffs house and a Commended for his work on a Waipara new build.

Nic Curragh of Objects Ltd won two regional awards: a Residential

New Home between 150-300sqm Architectural Design Award for his work on 'Springbank Downs House' and a Commercial Interior Architectural Design Award for his work on Freemans Restaurant in Lyttelton.

Chris Wheeler of Hierarchy Architecture won two awards for his work on two commercial spaces. Wheeler received the Resene Colour in Design Award for his work on 'New York Deli' and a Highly Commended for his commercial interior work on Fire + Ice in Hanmer.

Julian O'Sullivan of Opus Architecture received a Commercial/Industrial Architectural Design Award for his work on the Chinese Methodist Church located on Papanui Road.

Mitchell Coll of Coll Architecture won a Residential Compact New Home up to 150sqm Architectural Design Award for his work on the complete rebuild of a historic worker's cottage located in Chester St.

In addition, Highly Commendeds were awarded to Hamish McCaul of ArchiDesign, Sean McCurrie of SDMC Architecture Ltd and Pippin Wright-Stow of F3 Design.

Regional awards have been held across the country, with the national awards which to be held on Friday, October 28, 2016.
