

National award winner

This Queenstown home known as Il Viaggio has won architect Gary Todd the national award for Residential New Home over 300 square metres at the Resene Architectural Design Awards, announced last night. It is set on a 4-hectare rural block in Tuckerbeach Rd and merges on to the terraces looking over the Shotover River. It has views of Coronet Peak and the surrounding mountains. The judges said the robust forms of the house match the scale and texture of the alpine landscape. They were impressed with the clearly articulate plan, which provides for various kinds of occupation. They congratulated Todd on a well-resolved and consistently detailed design that, although large, manages to combine grandeur with intimate spaces.
