

Cambridge firm in architectural awards

A Cambridge firm is among those recognised at the 2016 Waikato Regional ADNZ Resene Architectural Design Awards

At a ceremony in Rotorua, Vaughan Bayley of Vaughan Bayley Designs, received a Commended Award for his Marsden Extension project, in the alterations and additions category for his work on the renovation of a home/office.

The brief called for a stylish modern entry and a new office and meeting room to be added to an existing concrete tilt slab house.

The decision was made to create a glazed atrium entry which extended over the front portico, office/home entry, guest wc and to the external BBQ area.

To keep the office and meeting rooms separate from the main home, an automated glass sliding door was installed to allow easy access. Judges commented the project provides a range of additional functions in spaces set alongside the existing house.

"An impressive extension on a minimal budget," they said.

The ADNZ Resene Architectural Design Awards are held annually. This year more than 149 entries were received. The awards recognise creative and well-designed residential, commercial, alterations and multi-use projects from across New Zealand.

Hamilton designer Noel Jessop of Noel Jessop Architecture received four awards for three projects. Jessop received a Commercial/Industrial Architectural Design Award for his work on Ember Restaurant on Church Road in the Waikato, a Residential Interiors Architectural Design Award and a Residential New Home Over 300m² Architectural Design Award for a home titled 'Black on White' and a Highly Commended for work on a bush bach hideaway located in the Coromandel.

Hamilton designer, Tane Cox of Red Architecture received two awards for his design 'Crows-nest'.

Designed for a sea-side site at Whale Bay in Raglan, the brief was for a surfer's stay.

Kris Wilson of Design House Architecture received a commended for his work on a bold beach house located in the Coromandel.

Andre Laurent of Creative Space Architecture was awarded a commended for his project titled 'Little Bay'. Laurent received recognition for his work in the residential new home over 300m² category.

Brendon Gordon of Brendon Gordon Architecture Ltd received a Highly Commended for his work on a beach house located on the Whangamata harbour front. Gordon was recognised in the residential new home over 300m² category.
