NATIONAL ARCHITECTURE AWARDS

In addition to these two awards, nine national design awards were awarded throughout New Zealand. The winner of this year's SUPREME ADNZ | Resene Architectural Design Award went to The Health and Science Centre at Waiariki Institute of Technology's Mokoia Campus in Rotorua, designed by Darryl Church of Darryl Church Architecture in association with MOAA Architects.

The Health and Science Centre features teaching areas, classrooms and common spaces which are visually connected through glass walls. To avoid a static learning environment, moveable glass walls allow teaching rooms to be adapted to accommodate class sizes and students are free to observe each other learning, studying and communicating from every point of the building.
